

Governments shouldn't track its citizens.

I agree up to a point that governments shouldn't spy on their citizens. There is a wide range of materials stating that governments misuse their power to track its citizens.

I'm in two minds about the propriety of tracking citizens. On the one hand, I agree that everyone has a right to lead a private life, no one, including governments, can not break it. I believe that tracking people is the same as intruding in their lives. On the other hand, since 9/11 there has been a lot of concern about the terrorist organizations and govs have taken measures to prevent terrible events as in 2001. That makes a lot of sense in terms of protection to keep track of citizens.

All in all, I've got mixed feelings, whether it's right to spy on citizens or not. People have the privacy right, however, tracking might help to prevent terrible events such as terrorist attacks.
